Performance to 31 March 2026

Whilst Indian equity markets have been impacted over the last 12 months by high valuations, slowing earnings growth, geopolitical issues (tariff threats, weaker currency and rising oil prices), the fund has continued to perform well relative to its benchmark, particularly over longer-term periods. Apart from the September quarter in 2025, where the fund was impacted by some company specific factors such as competitive risk in Indian Energy Exchange), the fund has outperformed over most periods. Since inception, the Fund has generated 9.47% p.a. which is 6.76% p.a. ahead of the BSE 500's 2.71% p.a., over the same time period. This highlights the fund's high-conviction and thematic approach, which is appropriate for long-term sophisticated investors in the Indian equity markets.

Key Drivers This Quarter:

Positive Contributors:

The positive contributors to outperformance over the March quarter were the three pharmaceutical holdings of Aurobindo Pharma, Glenmark Pharma and Granules. As markets were impacted by the US/Israel and Iran war, these companies outperformed as they had less impact from rising oil prices and are benefitting from a weaker currency.

Detractors:

Over the quarter the three largest detractors were Maruti Suzuki (auto company impacted by rising oil prices), Redington (India) on concerns about the tech sector and Kaveri Seed who may be impacted by rising costs and compressed margins.

Investment Themes of the India 2030 Fund

Themes	Drivers
	Manufacturing and Commodities • Tap niche manufacturing segments, industries that are consolidating. • Business models and valuations have been overlooked, as historically these have been non-performers.
	External Facing Businesses • Businesses capitalizing on India's relative global strength on factors of production, cost leadership • To feed into the global supply chain, as the world's largest manufacturer runs into multiple headwinds and supply chain resilience garners traction • Indexed to services and manufacturing
	Urban Consumption • Businesses aligned to wage increases in the services export economy • Businesses well-placed to capture the long-term shift of consumption from rural to urban migration

India 2030

Market Views from Kenneth Andrade, Founder and Director, Old Bridge

We entered 2026 on the heels of a slowing economy, a correcting market and a global narrative around tariffs. The last 6 yrs have seen a period of significant geopolitical uncertainties. Each of these events played a different role in impacting the Indian financial markets. Covid-19 had a pervasive impact on the global economy. The Ukraine war and the policy actions aftermath have had a more directed impact, principally on energy. The Israel-Hamas impact was negligible on the financial markets as it was localized. The tariffs may have had little impact on business fundamentals, but it did create uncertainty, impacting the financial markets.

Crude Impact

The recent Middle East conflict is poised to have a far more durable impact on India than any geopolitical disturbance over the past six years. The timing was unfortunate, arriving just as a cooling domestic economy was seeking momentum. The result: March 2026 marked India's weakest month, quarter, and year since COVID-19. Every US$20 rise in crude adds roughly US$100 million per day to India's import bill, and March saw a US$44 (63%) surge in weighted average crude prices. The shock extends beyond oil to natural gas, LPG, petrochemicals, and fertilisers, exposing India's energy vulnerability. With limited domestic crude value-chain capacity, logistics and raw-material costs have spiked, fuelling inflation, particularly in agricultural inputs. India consumes nearly 30% of global fertilisers yet remains heavily dependent on Middle Eastern supply chains, making agri-inflation an inevitable near-term risk.

Inflationary Forces in 2026

India now carries the dual risk of a slowing economy and rising inflation. The frantic selling of the rupee, driven by persistent FII outflows and significant repatriation by long-term FDI providers has accelerated currency weakness. The rupee fell 4% in a single month, sliding from 91 to 95 against the USD between end-February and end-March 2026. A rising import bill combined with a falling currency sets the stage for meaningful inflation in the short to medium term. This will likely surface through softer demand, margin compression, and stretched government finances. With limited room for manoeuvre across the Government of India, the RBI, corporates, and consumers, time becomes the only real stabiliser.

Portfolio Positioning

We are positioning the portfolio toward income-generating assets and businesses less exposed to discretionary services and consumption, adding to the latter only when valuations are exceptionally compelling. This aligns with our broader view that the market is entering a more inflationary phase. In the rest of the portfolio, demand remains intact, but margin visibility is limited. For example, our exposure to Pharmaceuticals and Chemicals may experience cost pressures, yet end-product demand should remain resilient, with profitability varying by market and segment. Commodities may face higher energy costs but given their USD-linked pricing and improving fundamentals, they are likely to benefit from the inflation impulse.

We believe the next 12 months offer an attractive window to build a durable portfolio for the next market upcycle, with ongoing uncertainty continuing to create favourable entry points.

Our Philosophy

IAIM's investment philosophy focuses on three key aspects:

1) India will likely be a high GDP growth region relative to other regions given its strong fundamentals.

2) Equity markets in India are relatively inefficient, allowing active fund managers to benefit from their research and knowledge relative to passive investors.

3) Locally based fund managers in India have an advantage relative to global investors when it comes to investing in Indian equities due to their knowledge of the local laws, business principles and overall ecosystem.
